

We may not be able to bring into our household work, the co-operative methods that now dominate in such large measure the business realm. But we can institute co-operation among the members of the family in reference to running the household machinery, that will greatly lighten the house-keeper's tasks.

The whole family should co-operate toward running the house in a systematic, orderly fashion. The go-as-you-please home, in which each pursues his own pleasures or necessities regardless of the others, lays a hundred-fold heavier burden upon the wife and mother to keep it orderly and neat and well supplied than the one where each plays his part toward keeping the whole running properly.

Yet many mothers who are struggling with the household problem do not realize that it is this haphazard, go-as-you-please spirit that is the root of the trouble.

The children rush in from school bringing a trail of mud. They leave doors open, throw their books around, possibly, if they are hungry, make a raid on the larder. Then off they go again to play.

The daughter learns home from business, eats her dinner in a hurry, scurries upstairs to dress, and rushes off to some party or entertainment, leaving her room looking as if a whirlwind had struck it. The head of the house throws newspapers around, or leaves a trail of cigar ashes wherever he goes. And the mother trots around after each, and picks up and straightens up, until she is tired and worn out and disgusted with the whole business. Or else, she lets the house remain in this chaotic condition.

It is pure thoughtlessness on the part of every member of the family who does these things—thoughtlessness that will grow into selfishness. They really have no deep conception of the meaning of home, nor what it stands for. But if they were taught right from the very start that it is a co-operative scheme, and that it is to each one of them to shoulder his part, affairs would go very differently. If a child is brought up to feel that he is responsible for a certain share of the order, neatness and system of the home, he will take up his task rather proudly. It is a far better method for getting each to do his part than scolding. It is enlisting the co-operative spirit, the feeling of ownership, and most of us respond to this.

In the co-operative home, the wife and mother is the leader, not the drudge. She works with the others, not solely for them. And she finds much more pleasure in her work, than she does when she shoulders it all. The atmosphere of the home is improved in every way.

So, it will pay the mistress of the go-as-you-please home to hold a little conference with the other members of the household and adopt the co-operative plan. Whether the children are young or old, it will do no harm to put it up to them to assume their share. And it might not be amiss for a son or daughter who sees his mother a slave to the careless, haphazard habits of the family to start the revolution. But, however it is brought about, if the go-as-you-please home is changed into the co-operative one, it will prove more satisfying to every member of the family.

FIFTEEN TAKE THE EXAMINATION

Out of twenty-three men who signified their intention of taking the examination for positions on the board of health staff of inspectors, only fifteen turned up at the College of Hawaii yesterday afternoon. These men were given twenty written questions to answer, and most of them had a try at all the brain teasers.

The examining board had a meeting, after the tests were completed, and decided to go over the papers to the names and papers of each man, and the examiners will not know whose paper they are examining.

The twenty questions were based on the matters dealt with in the health pamphlet that Dr. Pratt compiled some time ago. All those men who wished to try for positions on the inspectorial staff were required to study up the pamphlet, as the knowledge contained therein was necessary in order to have a chance of passing the tests.

The examination conducted yesterday was a county one, and the men who may pass and obtain positions on the board of health staff will be paid by the county.

The results of the examination may be announced tomorrow sometime.

MRS. OLSON'S FUNERAL.

The funeral services for Ingaborg Wikstrum Olson, the wife of Attorney Clarence H. Olson, were held at two o'clock this afternoon at her late residence in College Hills, and were attended by a large number of friends. Rev. A. A. Ebersole, associate pastor of Central Union church, a neighbor and friend, officiated, speaking a few brief and impressive words. Mrs. Bruce Mackall, a personal friend of Mrs. Olson's, sang. Acting as pallbearers were Judge Stanley, Judge Lindsay, Attorney Louis J. Warren, Robert Bond, Ralph Hosmer and Robert Mist, all close friends and business associates of Mr. Olson.

Following the funeral services private cremation took place.

All that loving hearts and hands could do to lighten the weight of grief for those nearest and dearest was done, and seldom have more exquisite floral offerings been seen. Hundreds of friends have expressed in notes and calls and flowers the love and sympathy they feel, and the deepest sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved husband.

Mrs. Olson was not taken ill till last Tuesday night, and when her condition became no better three physicians in consultation decided an operation was necessary. This was performed successfully at midnight Saturday at the Queen's hospital. The patient rallied from the operation and yesterday morning seemed quite improved. About nine o'clock, however, her heart began to fail, the severe strain of the past few days having proved too great, and death occurred shortly after eleven.

COUNTRY CLUB COSTUME FOR SUMMER WEAR.

Heavy laces on lingerie materials are always effective and this dainty coat for wear over thin frocks is made of tan batiste with real cluny lace dyed in the same pale tan shade. The coat reaches to the knee and is accompanied by a chic little tricorn hat of cream milan trimmed with an odd ostrich feather ornament and three pert bows of black velvet poised on the brim. The parasol, in rich shades of mauve and rose, adds color to the costume.

DUTY CALLS HIM

be the delegates to the national convention.

Delegate Kalaniana'ole spoke first in English, saying in substance:

"I have represented you as Delegate in Congress for the past ten years. An issue has arisen in that time as you all know. I went to Washington to attend to the business of this Territory. While there I made charges against the administration of this Territory, conscientiously believing that I was right.

"Since that time I have been called home. Since I have been here many questions have arisen and the most important one is the cry 'Kill Kuluho.' but after a few weeks in the Territory here another fact arose, and that fact is the bill in Congress for free sugar. What with the Frear fight and the sugar bill the future of our Delegate is at stake. Your Delegate has decided to go back to Washington. It is my duty.

"I do not go because the sugar planters want me to, but because I am satisfied that with the backers I have here I can safely trust the people of this Territory. I believe that the people will give me a square deal. With regard to the controversy I leave it to you, and with the confidence I have in you I believe you will uphold me. "I ask you to protect me in the convention. It is a peculiar position I am in, to leave my fight here and go to Washington. Even if I am beaten in the convention I consider it is my duty to go back to my duties in Congress.

"I have been in Congress ten years and though I have never made a speech on the floor of the House, yet nothing I have asked Congress for Hawaii but has been given. I do not say that I can influence the Senate, although I have some good friends in the Senate.

"I am the only one who has announced himself as a candidate for the national convention at Chicago, and I am a Taft man, and I want you to send me to the national convention." Speaking in his mother tongue Delegate Kalaniana'ole mentioned the Advertiser and the Star as attacking him. He announced that in his absence his fight would be in the hands of John C. Lane and W. C. Achil. "I have a few friends among the whites also," said the Delegate, "such as Jack Atkinson and Breckons. Some whites believe in equal rights but others are different—they want to be the whole cheese."

Chairman Lane, in dismissing the meeting, said that at the coming convention the price, as the latter had stated, knew who his friends would be. It was desirable that the people should send a solid delegation behind the prince for Taft, so that the President would be shown that the Delegate had the backing of the people of Hawaii.

This closing remark of the chairman came much nearer than anything Kalaniana'ole himself had said to signify that, on the Delegate's side, the "Kuluho-Frear" controversy was intended to be forced into the territorial convention.

The band remained throughout the speaking and at the close played Hawaii, Ponoi and Star Spangled Banner.

All politics is machine made, although some may be better than others.

THE THEATERS

Magician Works Among Audience.

The Bijou's show last night was a two-hour affair and the large audience surely got its money's worth, for there was quality as well as quantity in the acts. Prof. Frank G. Schmidt, the magician, though a man of rather weak voice, was very strong in the line of tricks and had the audience guessing with his mystifying acts. While many of his tricks were old, they were very cleverly executed and many of them were done right among the audience and still they weren't detected.

The only fault that could be found with the Professor was that he didn't talk loud enough and couldn't be heard beyond the middle of the house.

Athon and Johnson and Harold Bowen made their farewell appearance last night and were in very fine mettle. Athon's Elk song was elegantly rendered. He is without doubt the best all-around actor that has ever stepped on a Honolulu stage.

Curtis and Le Van, the funny kids, were seen in a singing and talking act that was on a par with their past successes. Varin and Varin in songs, monologues and dialogues, with a xylophone solo by Miss Varin, rounded out the biggest program that was ever seen at a vaudeville and motion picture house.

Savoy Draws Well.
Despite the very strong attraction at the Bijou the Savoy had a very good crowd last night and put on a moving picture show that was as instructive as it was interesting. Parry's orchestra furnished a very good musical program.

GOVERNOR OFF TO HILO.

Governor Frear left for Hilo this morning and will be away till Saturday next. He intends to look over the plans for a "Greater Hilo," and to discuss them with the Hilo people. The governor is taking the greatest interest in the scheme to open the residence lots down near Waikanae, and also out along the country that leads to the breakwater.
